Hills' Year of Health and Safety initiative secures national award

Swindon based Hills Waste Solutions has received a prestigious national health and safety award at the national Chartered Institute of Wastes Management (CIWM) Sustainability and Resource awards.

Hills competed in the 'Delivering Health and Safety Best Practice' category with its Year of Health and Safety initiative which delivered a significant improvement in work place health and safety and a reduction in accidents.

Paul Elling, Waste Solutions' health and safety manager, reflected on the award saying: "We were up against some really tough competition, so winning the overall prize is brilliant."

Mike Webster, Group director – Waste Solutions added: "This Health and Safety initiative was just the start of a concerted focus on making Hills' sites as safe as possible. Winning this award is great testament to the effort of everyone involved but it doesn't mean our work is done. The ultimate prize will be to make our working environments as safe as we possibly can."
