Hills raises cash for children's hospice

Staff at the Hills Group headquarters wore wacky clothes and enjoyed lots of sweet treats to raise money for a children's hospice.

Hills, which has a portfolio including waste management, recycling, quarrying and house-building, has its head office in Swindon and the staff held a Mad Hatter's tea party on July 29 on behalf of the Naomi House and Jackspace hospice.

Mike Hill, chief executive, said: "We are really pleased to be able to support this wonderful charity. As a family company, it is important to us to give something back and continue to help charitable causes as much as we can.

"I am constantly impressed by the generosity of our staff, who always get involved and support these fundraising days.

"Without them, events like this would not be possible."

The charity will benefit from £250 raised through a dress-down, raffle, cake sale and lucky dip.
