Tens of thousands of people are expected to attend the three day event which boasts a packed programme including an air show, military displays, children's and community activities, free live entertainment and a firework finale.

Mike Hill, chief executive said: "As a business we have close connections with the military through our longstanding contract with KBR Aspire Defence – providing waste management and recycling for the army barracks on Salisbury Plain and Aldershot. We also have a number of employees who have served in the forces - so we are delighted to play such a pivotal role in this prestigious and high profile event."
